A Milestone for Malaysia's Data Protection Landscape

Malaysia stands at a pivotal moment in its digital transformation. As businesses embrace cloud ecosystems, generative AI, automation, and cross-border data flows, the need for clarity in personal data governance has never been more urgent.

This publication, Personal Data Protection Law: A Legal and Corporate Guide for Data Privacy in Malaysia, arrives at the right time. Authored by Ong Johnson and Lo Khai Yi, who also served on the Drafting Committee for Malaysia's Data Protection Officer (DPO) Framework under the Personal Data Protection Commissioner (PDPC), the book consolidates both practical experience and regulatory insight.

It is designed as a definitive reference for:

- practitioners and in-house counsel,
- regulators and policymakers,
- corporate leaders navigating compliance,
- and technology-driven organisations advancing responsible innovation.

We invite you to join us as we celebrate this milestone and continue contributing to Malaysia's growing digital and data protection ecosystem.

Event Closing

"This book comes at an important time in Malaysia's data protection journey. It shows that the conversation on personal data protection is no longer confined to policymakers or regulators but shared by practitioners, industries and experts who bring the legislation to life through daily practice."

Puan Shariffah Rashidah binti Syed Othman
Personal Data Protection Commissioner of Malaysia

"By weaving together legal analysis and practical application, the book offers clarity and guidance at a time when many organisations are looking for direction. It will undoubtedly serve as an essential reference for practitioners, professionals, and business leaders who are committed to protecting personal data with integrity and confidence."

Prof. Dr. Mohd Nazri Kama
Former Personal Data Protection Commissioner of Malaysia
